

PARALLEL CONFIGURATION SYSTEM FOR HYBRID VEHICLES

Abstract of the Disclosure

A parallel configuration system for hybrid propulsion vehicles is provided. The drive thrust is distributed between an electric engine and an internal combustion engine through a transmission system delivering the torque of both engines to the vehicle wheels. The internal combustion engine is a diesel engine operating at steady state at an operation point having the highest efficiency and with the consumption and emissions being reduced.